FARM TOPICS

FILES HELP IMPROVE POSTURE

COMMENTS ON BRITISH APPLE MARKET

(An interview with Mr. Mulvaney, British Vice-Consul in Portland, by W. S. Rowe, Cumberland County Agent.)

"Debutante slouch" adapted by women during the straight dress from 1916 to 1926 has left its mark, says Helen Spaulding, specialist, University of "Unfortunately," she continues, "the dress of the day disguised carriage and ugly posture under long loose top and fluttering skirt. Repairing the damage now requires regular and persistent effort."

Incorrect posture and carriage have existed for a considerable time. There are two steps essential for maintaining good posture:

1. First one must learn the principles of normal, healthful posture, some exercises for disciplining the body so that it can maintain such posture.

2. It is often easiest to get the benefit of the correct relation of the body in a prone position gravity to help in assuming the posture.

The subject lies flat on the floor with the arms extended above the head, the chin pulled in toward the chest and the entire body relaxed as far as possible, then flexing the slightly, the hips are rolled back by contracting the muscles and abdominal muscles are pulled in until the spine is flattened to the floor. The knees are then bent while the position of the feet is retained.

In order to maintain good posture the stretched or shortened muscle must have exercises to complement or to stretch them, and the same must be taken regularly and gently until the muscle is strong enough to do its work easily."

TRY PATHOLOGIST IS AVAILABLE IN MAINE

Many poultrymen now have available the services of a trained poultry pathologist. This is made possible by the appointment of Dr. J. F. Witter, who was recently announced by President H. S. Boardman, University of Maine.

Witter trained at the University of Michigan and obtained his D. V. M.

at Michigan State College Record Club. He took special work on poultry diseases. He is member of the College of Agriculture, Department of Animal Industry.

Specimens of diseased birds will be sent for examination from all over Maine. In this connection Dr. Witter suggests that the following points should be observed in getting the most benefit from the service.

Letters regarding sick flocks are satisfactory alone. Specimens should be sent for an accurate diagnosis.

Sick out of the flock several birds showing typical illness, one or more in early stages, and at least one in later stages of disease.

Send birds alive, if possible, birds decompose rapidly and are of little value for diagnosis.

Send the entire bird—don't try to pull the diseased part.

Send specimens by express, prepaid to Dr. J. F. Witter, Poultry Department, College of Agriculture, University.

Always send a letter with the description of the condition as fully as you can, including approximate number of the flock and the number affected.

Give your name and address. Mail and specimens must arrive at the University before noon Saturday.

Fee with past practice, no charge is made at present. In the event the number of calls for this service becomes too numerous, it may be necessary at some future time to make arrangements covering the cost.

FARM BUREAU ANNUAL MEETING OCT. 21—SPEAKER ANNOUNCED

Farm Bureau members in Oxford County will meet at Norway on Friday, Oct. 21, for their twelfth annual meeting. There will be a full program of exhibits, entertainment, addresses and business. Careful plans were made by the local committee on arrangements: Arthur Holman, Mrs. Edith Greenleaf, and Mrs. Edith Buck of Norway. Exhibits this year will be new and interesting. Special entertainment is planned and two speakers have been secured for 20 minute addresses. Prof. M. D. Jones, Farm Manager at the College, Instructor and past Farm Management Specialist will be present as well as George E. Lord, County Agent Leader, from the Extension Service.

The British certificate is required up to November 15. Starks and Son Davis, January 1. Grades U. S. Fancy and U. S. Fancy No. 1.

Apples to be inspected at the farm by the state inspector.

Prices reported as of September 21.

N. E. Gravenstein crates, $1.44 to $1.74; N. E. Wealthy crates, 1.62 to 2.10; N. E. McIntosh crates, 2.10 to 2.27.

Shipment in barrels is recommended. However, they will take boxes or crates but the latter must be strapped and this is usually done in Boston at a charge of ten cents per crate. All shipments are being sent out from Boston, special trucking rates have been secured to Boston from points at New Gloucester and Standish at 35 cents per barrel.

According to available information there is a gross charge of $2.52 per barrel. This covers the present rate of exchange, trucking to Boston, ocean rates, ten per cent tariff, wharfage, charge of auctioneer's fee, etc.

Growers are urged to ship most of their fruit prior to October 24 for on that date the first apple steamer sailing.

The following are the dates of sailing from Boston: Laconia, Oct. 1; George, Oct. 15; Titantic, Oct. 22; Ninian, Oct. 24; Laconic, Oct. 29.

As to the contemplated new tariff of $1.16 per barrel, Mr. Mulvaney says that it has not been ratified and he doubts very much if it will be.

McIntosh in barrels, brought, $6.83

STATEWIDE DRIVE FOR MORE EFFICIENT KITCHENS

Rural housewives in general and husbands in particular are being invited to attend the county kitchen meetings in their respective counties scheduled for this month and next. When a state wide Kitchen Improvement Contest will be launched.

This contest is sponsored by the Maine Farm Bureau Federation and is to be carried in 12 counties in the state. "Doing your best with what you have" or "Making the most improvements at the least expense" is the spirit back of the contest.

Husbands can help their wives to win by lending their assistance with hammer, saw, and paint brush.

Complete conditions of the contest will be explained at the county meetings and the prizes to be offered will be announced.

The state home management specialist, Edna M. Cobb, will attend each one of these meetings with the county extension agents and give a brief talk on "Convenient Kitchens."

The schedule of the meetings which are to be held evenings gives the Oxford County date as November 2d.
